

Market Gardening & Dearborn Township: Past Forward

Saturday, April 24, 2021

10—11 a.m.

Online via Zoom

FREE TO ALL

Debra Reid will share local history highlights about farm families raising fruits and vegetables for public markets during the 19th century, and how their worlds changed during industrialization and in response to the slow food movement. This will include an update on the Vegetable Building from Detroit's Central Market, a restoration in progress at The Henry Ford.

To join the talk, visit the events calendar at dearbornlibrary.org on the date/time of the discussion and click on the link (or call the number) provided there. No registration necessary.

*Debra Reid, Curator of Agriculture and the Environment at The Henry Ford, is the author of Interpreting Agriculture at History Museums and Historic Sites and has over thirty years of experience working in museums.*

